The city of Lillehammer presents itself as the Norwegian Capitol of Events, and despite it's relatively small size (by international measures), it is known for being the host city of the 1994 Winter Olympics as well as the 2016 Youth Olympics.

The local audience is also familiar to sports associated to the forest and the smell of sawdust: The World Logging Championship was held just outside of Lillehammer in 1987!

Welcome to Håkons Hall – to a professional venue, tried and tested by Olympic games.

Welcome to a sports event, a family event, an action event and a test of swift precision.

Welcome to a city in the middle of Innlandet - the region that is home to green and lush forest hills, to a varied forestry based industry and the worlds tallest wood building: Mjøstårnet!

Welcome to Norway and Lillehammer, and to the World Logging Championship 2018!

WOMEN'S CLASS

We welcome women to step up to the international logging scene, with a brand new women's class at WLC2018!

With this new class, all countries will have the opportunity to participate with one more competitor at this years championship!

The women's class will be an integrated part of the competition and program, and the participants will get the same accommodation etc. as the other competitors (they will be treated the same as i.e. the junior class). The participants in the women's class will be ranked separately, and are not eligible for an official world champion title.

Women are of course able to compete as a part of their national team in the regular elite and junior class, like they have been able to at previous championships. In that case the ranking is not separate, and they can compete for the world champion title.

With a brand new women's class at the World Logging Championship 2018, we aim to empower more women to take their place and be a part of the international logging community!
